Chairman Bryant then recognized Chancellor Robert Witt for a report from The University of Alabama System. He thanked Chancellor Witt for the nice dinner last night at the Chancellor’s house and said they appreciate the work Sandee has done in it sprucing up.

Thank you, Trustee Bryant. When Bill Jones, whom we recognized yesterday for his outstanding service, first informed me of his plans to retire, we decided to rethink his position because with Federal and state budget cuts, increased competition for government support, and with the fact that the UA System has been asked to play an increasingly important role in economic development, we felt that increasing the scope and responsibility of Bill’s position would be the appropriate way to move.

We made the decision to change the title to Vice Chancellor for Government Relations and Economic Development to reflect its increased responsibilities. We were looking for someone who would bring a unique set of skills and experience to our senior leadership team. In hiring Congressman Bonner, we believe we have hired the ideal person for this position. He is highly respected in Montgomery, he is well respected and connected in Washington, DC, and he can be invaluable to Michael Bownes, who manages our government relations program in Washington. Congressman Bonner’s track record in economic development in South Alabama is extraordinary and he will be invaluable to the System as we meet our responsibilities in that area.

Community service is an integral part of the mission and responsibility of each of our campuses. There is a remarkable young man named Stephen Black who is a full-time staff member working on Judy Bonner’s campus. He will remain a full-time staff member there, continuing in his role in the Center for Ethics and Social Responsibility. Under Stephen Black’s leadership, an extensive array of community service and initiatives have been developed that resulted in more than 1.1 million hours of community service by UA students in the past year. Stephen has accepted an appointment at the System level as a special assistant to me regarding community service and engagement and to make available to the other campuses, if they are interested, the full array of programs that he has developed so they can be implemented on their campuses.

I have, sent under separate cover to your offices, Stephen Black’s last two annual reports and I think you will be extremely impressed with what he has been able to accomplish.

Distance Education has been around for many, many decades, going back to the days of correspondence courses where materials were mailed back and forth between students and teachers. Over the last decade or so, Distance Education has moved increasingly in the direction of being on line. In the last few years, the rate of development of on-line education has dramatically accelerated with some of the country’s most respected universities – Harvard, Stanford, MIT, Michigan, Texas – putting literally thousands of courses on line.

These courses were there for students to take free of charge but they did not carry degree credit. In the last couple of years, some platforms have emerged to help facilitate people accessing these on-line courses. In the last year or so, there has been a clear indication that we are relatively close to multiple organizations developing business models that will allow them to offer these on-line courses for credit at very competitive costs.

If you look at the evolution of Distance Education over the decades, change has been gradual and incremental. I strongly believe we have entered a period of disruptive change. I believe now is the time for each of our campuses to rapidly and aggressively assess the potential impact of on-line courses being available from respected institutions at a low cost. In the last couple of weeks, Georgia Tech, a highly respected university, has partnered with one of the platforms, Udacity, and with AT&T to offer a Master’s Degree in Computer Science for approximately $7,000. When a highly respected institution can offer a well branded degree for a competitive price and facilitate people being able to access it, because they don’t have to go back and forth between campuses, we have a potential threat that we need to carefully assess.

If you look at the revenue statements of each of our campuses, as was just pointed out in the Finance Committee meeting, we are very dependent on tuition revenue. If competition from on-line courses impacts any of our campuses by as little as five or ten percent in terms of lost semester credit hours, the impact on that budget will be significant because instructional costs are, for all intents and purposes, fixed and they will not go down as semester credit hours go down. We need to be prepared to deal with that. We will be appointing a Systemwide committee and I will be asking for Board representation on the committee. We will begin work immediately on a very careful assessment of not only the threats but the potential opportunities for our campuses.

One of the most important responsibilities of the Chancellor’s Office and of this Board is to ensure that we are in a position to know whether or not our campuses and our Health System are managing risks as we should. Everything I have learned to date indicates to me that our three campuses and our Health System are doing a good job of managing risks. But the risks that they are managing are increasing, in part because of proliferation of Federal rules and regulations.

The media have been full of instances where highly respected institutions are writing big checks to make up for lapses. We need to be in a position, both in terms of the Chancellor’s Office and the members of this Board, to be certain that we are managing risks as we should. Adding Chad Tindol to our staff has allowed us to make significant progress and systematically examining risks and reassuring ourselves that we in the position we should be.

Given the proliferation of risks, I will be forming a Systemwide committee, again asking for Board representation, so we can be certain that we are managing risks well on the three campuses and in the Health System and ensure that we are managing risks in the same way. If two of our campuses are managing a particular type of risk one way and another campus is doing it in a different way, and the campus with the different way faces a lawsuit, the very fact that the other two component campuses are doing it differently becomes a liability. I think working with this committee, we will be able to do a much better job of reassuring you that we are on top of the risk situation.

Thank you.
