A REAFFIRMATION OF THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN
STILLMAN COLLEGE AND THE UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA
TO ENGAGE IN INTERINSTITUTIONAL COOPERATION

A longstanding relationship has existed between Stillman College and The University of Alabama, a relationship that was formalized in 1972 and has included a number of productive, mutually beneficial activities in recent years. In recognition of this experience, and with a view to expanding or otherwise enhancing the opportunities for further collaboration, the two institutions undertook a reexamination of their relationship, commencing with The University of Alabama/Stillman College Joint Committee on Interinstitutional Cooperation formed at the behest of Presidents Wynn and Thomas. Following the first meeting of the new Joint Committee in the Spring of 1983, and subsequent meetings of several task forces, a final summary report was issued that described a broad range of responses both institutions could make to maintaining close cooperation in many areas that would be mutually beneficial and enhance each other's ability to provide educational experiences of the highest quality.

We now reaffirm the relationship that exists between Stillman College and The University of Alabama and agree to actively pursue expanded opportunities for cooperative efforts, such as those projected in "The Final Summary Report of the Stillman College and The University of Alabama Joint Task Forces on Interinstitutional Cooperation," and those that will be identified and recommended as this newly reconstituted and expanded relationship evolves.

Signed on this 22 day of July, 1985.

Cordell Wynn, President
Stillman College

Joab L. Thomas, President
The University of Alabama
