The Alabama Digital Humanities Center (ADHC) offers faculty, staff, and advanced students resources to explore digital humanities. Organized and supported by a community of academics at the University of Alabama, the ADHC provides technical skills, equipment, and collaborative opportunities to researchers at all levels of expertise and interest in the field. More...

Read about our projects in progress, browse our resources, or come and visit our space in Gorgas Library, Room 109A. We are available to answer questions and consult with you on projects of any size. We also regularly host events: talks, workshops, and brown bag lunch discussions on topics of interest in digital humanities.

Featured Project »

"To See Justice Done": Letters from the Scottsboro Boys Trials

More than eighty years ago, on March 25, 1931, nine young African Americans hopped a train in a Chattanooga freight yard and headed west. Unemployed...